

NOXIOUS WEED IDENTIFICATION
 The Dirty Dozen Plus (In Alphabetical Order by Common Name)

Black Henbane	Canada thistle	Chinese Clematis	Dalmatian Toadflax
 A photograph of a Black Henbane plant, showing its characteristic lobed leaves and clusters of small, pale flowers.	 A photograph of a Canada thistle plant with purple flower heads. A wooden ruler is placed vertically next to the plant for scale, showing measurements in inches and centimeters.	 A close-up photograph of a single Chinese Clematis flower, which is bright yellow and has a distinctive spurred shape.	 A photograph of a Dalmatian Toadflax plant, showing its upright stems with clusters of small yellow flowers.
Diffuse Knapweed	Downy Brome	Hoary Cress	Houndstongue
 A close-up photograph of a Diffuse Knapweed flower head. A white arrow points to the base of the flower head, which is covered in spiny bracts. The text "Spiny Bracts" is written in white next to the arrow.	 A photograph of a Downy Brome grass, showing its characteristic long, thin, and drooping awns against a blue sky with light clouds.	 A photograph of a Hoary Cress plant, showing its dense, rounded cluster of small yellow flowers.	 A close-up photograph of a Houndstongue flower, which is a bright pink color and has a unique, spurred shape.

Leafy Spurge	Musk Thistle	Myrtle Spurge	Orange Hawkweed

Oxeye Daisy	Scentless Chamomile	Yellow Sweet clover	Yellow Toadfax
